The Lolita club's first ball given last night in the opera house was the grand success that all had expected it would be. The building was neatly decorated and the floor never was smoother, and a better nor more elegant time never was had in the building. Jepperson's augmented quadrille band discoursed music that seemed sweeter and better than any that has been heard in a ball room in Provo for many a day. The crowd was large, not too crowded, and happy. Light, life and merriment ruled the night and gaily beamed from every face. The ladies were charmingly dressed and looked more than lovely; the gentlemen, all, were handsomely clad and gallant. The majority of the throng were young unmarried society people, although there was a goodly sprinkling of the older element. The crowd was a very social and a most happy one. All who were out were more than satisfied with the evening's entertainment and are already eager for the next hop to be given by the Lolita club.

THE boys of the Provo Volunteer Fire department are sure riding on the high wave of popularity, and what's more, they've been riding on that wave for a long time and seemed destined to stay there as long as they are an organized body. Whenever they assemble that they are to give an entertainment of any kind the crowds all flock to that entertainment, no matter what the counter attraction may be nor how late the announcement is given after the opposition has covered the town with advertising. Late last week the fire boys decided to give a dance on Christmas night, and through a three line notice in this paper announced the fact. Notwithstanding this short notice and the fact that they raised prices, that dance was crowded to overflowing last night with a happy crowd. To say that they enjoyed themselves and to say that the dance was a grand success socially as well as every other way is just like saying that Wilber's name is Withers—a fact that everybody knows, that is self-evident, a superfluity of words. Anything that Chief Withers and his men manage is managed all right to the entire satisfaction of all, just as that dance was last night.

A Woman's First Duty.
"The last half century," says Mrs. Jennie Lozier, ex-president of Sorosis, "marks a marvelous advance in the education of women. From the struggles of Mary Lynn of Mount Holyoke and Emma Willard of Troy to the opening of Johns Hopkins, Yale and Harvard to women stretches a period of unflinching effort and brilliant success. There have been many similar movements in the past when women seemed about to enter into their rightful inheritance. They demonstrated the possibilities of women by their achievements, but the conditions of society were unfavorable. Because of the leisure, wealth and freedom of thought which now prevail as the results of civilization indispensable to culture we have now an environment which gives permanency and vigor to any attainments we may make. There is an axiom that the status of woman is an infallible index of progress. This test ranks our civilization higher than any that has preceded it. Women's clubs have gone into the home and brought the homekeepers into the current of affairs. It has gathered an army of good women whose misfortune was perhaps to have been born too soon; women whose education, incomplete in the beginning, had been completely ruined by an avalanche of shifts and puddings. These women were in danger of mental starvation. They needed some influence to give them an outlook beyond the walls of home and an outlook into their own mental condition. This influence emanates from the women's club."

"A woman's first duty is to make herself strong, intellectual, brave and happy, and then to build her home, train her children, enlighten public sentiment and maintain social parity."

When Israel first set eyes on Mr. Biggar in the house of commons, he said to his friend Achates, "What is that?" "That, sir, is the honorable member for So-and-so." "Really?" replied the other. "I thought it was a leprechaun," which is a small but malignant species of Irish fairy. —San Francisco Argonaut.
